

PRESS RELEASE

Summer warms Didsbury property market

With the summer proving to be a bit of a damp squib, Didsbury estate agent, Markus Jolleys of Gascoigne Halman in the village is happy to report that even if the weather didn't warm up, the Didsbury property market certainly did.

Over what are usually the quieter months of the property year (June, July and August), the Didsbury office of Gascoigne Halman agreed sales on no less than 50 properties.

Commenting, Markus said, "I'm delighted to be in a position to report this surge in sales. Despite the negative comments you read in the national press, Didsbury is bucking the trend and house sales remain strong in our area."

And it's not hard to see why. According to Markus, the BBC relocation to Media City and forthcoming tram link have created a strong demand for properties.

Reflecting on his experience as a guest speaker at BBC relocation seminars over the last two years he suggests, "It was obvious during the seminars that Didsbury was going to be a favourite choice. The newcomers to Manchester were attracted not only by the fantastic transport links, but also to the vibrancy and diversity Didsbury offers."

With a sizeable property portfolio, the team at Gascoigne Halman is confident that the recent sales pattern will continue during the autumn.
