Poynton estate agent reports uplift in business

Poynton estate agent, James Coppock of Gascoigne Halman is happy to report that the village's current facelift is attracting homeowners to the area, drawn by an improved infrastructure and more varied retail offering.

The Poynton estate agent was pleased to report strong sales in September, October and the trend has continued in to November. During September alone, Gascoigne Halman helped three families who moved into Poynton commenting that they felt the recent improvements had made Poynton a more attractive place to live.

Commenting, James said, "Its really interesting that these people have all said that they can see the area improving in popularity as a result of the improvements and were keen to get in early, confident that their investment would be a wise one.

"For everyone living and working in the village the road works and changes in infrastructure have been really inconvenient but I think people can see the longer terms benefits so overall the feedback has been very positive."
